Navy panel that determines promotions faces inquiry

By Dale Eisman Virginian-Pilot Reporter

WASHINGTON — The Navy has terminated a board of officers that was reviewing the careers of more than 3,600 lieutenant commanders and has launched an investigation of how board members received "unapproved materials" about at least one candidate up for promotion.

The board's 69 members were sent back to their commands last week, according to the Navy Personnel Command, and the officer who furnished the materials to the board has been relieved of duty pending the results on an inquiry.

The Navy convenes promotion boards each winter and spring for officers and senior enlisted members. Board members travel to the Navy Personnel

Command headquarters in Millington and spend several days evaluating the records of those eligible to advance. There are separate boards for each rank and various officer communities. The boards meet in private and members are sworn not to discuss their deliberations with outsiders.

The boards are required to consider only materials in each candidate's official record, along with references and recommendations forwarded by the candidate. "Anything submitted to the board about an eligible (candidate) must have been seen by that eligible," said Mike McLellan, a spokesman for the Navy Personnel Command. And all that material must go through the board president; lobbying of individual board members is banned.

The dissolved board was to select about 700 lieutenant commanders for promotion to commander. Cmdr. Randy Lescault, another NPC spokesman, said a new panel would be named shortly. Because the boards meet well in advance of the beginning of the new fiscal year in October, when promotions begin to take effect, there should be no delay in advancements, McLellan said.

Vice Admiral Robert T. Conway Jr. assumes command of Navy Installations Command

WASHINGTON — Vice Adm. Robert Conway has assumed command of the Navy Installations Command (CNI). CNI is headquartered in Washington and is the office solely responsible for all Navy shore installations worldwide.

CNI is responsible for providing consistent, effective and efficient shore installation services in support of fleet readiness and mission execution. Furthermore, CNI provides service to the fleet by ensuring a cohesive and reliable adherence to policy, procedures, standards of service, processes and resources leveraging 16 regional commands in management and oversight of all installations worldwide.

Conway, a native of Wilkes-Barre, Pa., graduated from St. Francis College in Loretto, Pa., with a Bachelor of Arts degree and was commissioned as an ensign through officer candidate school. He earned his master's degree in education from Providence College in Providence, R.I., in May 1979. Additionally, he graduated from the National Defense University's Industrial College of the Armed Forces in May 1990. Throughout his naval career, Conway served in numerous leadership positions in ships and at installations, including commander of Navy Region Hawaii; commander of Expeditionary Strike Group One (in support of operations Iraqi Freedom and Enduring Freedom); and most recently, commander of Task Force Warrior.

MARCH IS WOMEN'S HISTORY MONTH

BY ART FRITH NSA MID-SOUTH PUBLIC AFFAIRS

This month marks the 19th annual observance of Women's History Month.

President Jimmy Carter started the observance in 1980 when he issued the first Presidential proclamation calling on all Americans to remember the contributions by women to our country. Seven years later, the U.S. Congress expanded the designated observance period to a month at the request of the National Women's History Project. Around the fleet, the Navy, too, is recognizing the many contributions made by female sailors throughout its history. Since 1987, Congress has issued a resolution and the president has issued an annual proclamation, for Women's History Month.

The Navy, too, takes time out during Women's History Month to recognize the contribution female sailors have made to our country. Women began serving in the Navy in 1908 as nurses. In 1942, the Women's Reserve of the Navy Reserve was created. These women were known as WAVES, Women Accepted for Volunteer Emergency Service. Following World War II, Congress passed legislation in 1948 to allow women to remain in the military under "permanent standing" paving the way for women to enlist and be appointed to the regular Navy and Navy Reserve. Their full integration into the Navy came about with the first woman being promoted to the rank of rear admiral in 1972.

The Naval Academy first accepted women as midshipmen in 1976, when Congress authorized the admission of women to all of the service academies. Women comprise about 13 to 14 percent of entering plebes—or freshmen—and they pursue the same academic and professional training, as do their male classmates.

Women were not assigned to ships, with the exception of nurses assigned to hospital ships. That all changed in Oct. 1978 when the Navy made headlines with the announcement that it would begin assigning women to ships. The first U.S. Navy ship on which women were deployed was the destroyer tender USS Vulcan (AR-5) home ported in Norfolk, VA. The first Adm. Patricia Tracey became the

COMMENTARY

Driving and Insurance - The Two Go Hand in Hand

Do you drive? If you do, you need insurance. Even if you think you're a safe and responsible driver, accidents happen. What's more, if you need a DoD sticker on your car, you must prove you have the state's minimum liability insurance levels to obtain the stickers. There are no exceptions!

Depending on your age and your driving record, automobile insurance can be quite expensive. Nonetheless, you must have insurance. I used to think there was no gray area here. That was, until recently.

I've heard too many cases of uninsured sailors turning to the Navy and Marine Corps Relief Society for financial assistance either to pay a fine for lapsed insurance or to help cover the costs of an accident when they had no insurance. This has to stop. While every state varies, Virginia (as an example) requires insurance carriers to notify the Department of Motor Vehicles (DMV) when a person alters their insurance. If you let your insurance lapse, DMV is notified and if your vehicle is still registered, you incur a $500 fine for having an uninsured, registered vehicle (whether you are driving the vehicle or not). Remember, it's the registration of the vehicle that is tied to your insurance, not the miles you drive. In addition, if you fail to maintain insurance, in addition to the fine, you could be required to then purchase SR-22 insurance (which is essentially high-risk insurance) for a period of three years. The cost of SR-

22 insurance is much higher affordable to insure; than normal insurance.

Here's what I suspect is happening. Some of you purchase vehicles that are not only expensive, but are expensive to insure. Again, depending on your age and driving record, there are cases where you can pay much more in insurance than the actual payment of the vehicle. Some of you probably purchase a vehicle, purchase the insurance, register your vehicle and get your license plates, then obtain your DoD stickers, and then when all that is done, cancel the insurance because you can't afford it (or worse, don't wish to pay it). While I'm hoping none of you ever do this, I'm not naive enough to think none of you do.

Before any of you purchase a vehicle, there are some things you should do first:

* Check with your insurance provider to see how much it will cost to insure the vehicle you want;

* Do some research to learn what vehicles are the most

* Research those cars that are most susceptible to theft;

* Create a budget and make sure you can afford both the vehicle loan and the insurance

Shipmates, insurance isn't cheap. It's expensive enough if you're under 21 with a clean driving record, but if you have some tickets or accidents on your record, the price of insurance can skyrocket, regardless of age or gender. Nonetheless, you still have to maintain insurance to drive. Look at it like this. If you are involved in an accident that is your fault, and you have insurance, you are generally only liable for your deductible payment. That's why you have insurance. If you don't have insurance, you may (and probably will) be sued by the other driver. If someone is hurt, the amount of money you could be liable for could easily cripple you financially. I wouldn't recommend taking that gamble!

I truly believe anyone with a driver's license knows the rules. You have to know the state's insurance requirements when you take your drivers license exam. To willingly ignore the law and cancel your insurance is reprehensible behavior - you put yourself and others at great financial risk and no matter your financial situation, you can't afford this.

My challenge to each of you is to carefully evaluate where you stand when it comes to insurance. Generally speaking, the younger you are, the more insurance costs. Why? Because statistics prove younger drivers are less experienced and are more prone to tickets and accidents. That's a clear fact. If you are a great driver, all you need to overcome is the age factor. That will happen in time.

One thing many of you probably don't want to do is purchase a safe car that is cheap to insure. Many of you prefer the flashy sports car or high-priced SUV that is extremely expensive to insure. When you're young, purchasing an automobile can be a huge financial investment. My advice is to think beyond the appearance and focus on your true need, balancing it against your age, driving record, income, financial goals, and other financial needs. I'm certainly not telling anyone what type of vehicle to purchase, but I will say that whatever you purchase, you need to have the financial ability to pay for the insurance premiums!

A final recommendation is you each need to understand the insurance minimum requirements for the state you live in. Each base Pass and ID office conforms to the state rules that the base is located in. There are some big state-to-state differences. If you don't take the time to educate yourself, and make sure your insurance meets the state minimums, you could find yourself in a financial bind if you are in an accident. Don't let that happen - know the law and I'll say it again, if you drive you must have insurance!

There's Nothing Funny About Taxes

By LIFELINES RESEARCH STAFF

Art Buchwald once said, "Tax reform is taking the taxes off things that have been taxed in the past and putting taxes on things that haven't been taxed

Ever since the Boston Tea Party, taxes have been a never-ending resource for humorists, since everyone understands the joke. Complicated tax forms, W-2s, 1099s, tax brackets, deductions, standard or itemized; all are designed to separate you from your money each year on April 15. Fortunately, Armed Forces personnel, retirees and their families have ready access to free tax assistance.

Active-duty personnel can find answers to relevant tax questions online in IRS Publication 3, Armed Forces' Taxes Guide, or they can request a hard copy of the publication. This guide explains military tax issues, such as filing tax extensions when stationed outside the United States and Puerto Rico, deductible expenses for a permanent change of station, and income that is tax-free (such as Basic Allowance for Housing and combat-zone exclusion). Imminent danger/hostile fire pay, a reenlistment bonus, and other income are tax free for combat-zone service. Even if personnel serve in a combat zone for only one day of the month, pay for that entire month

When it comes to filing taxes, some people want to fill out their own, so the IRS web site has all the forms and instructions needed. You can download and print off copies of tax forms and instructions if you want to do your taxes by hand - the old stubbypencil method. The site also has free software and free e-filing at IRS Free File. It's becoming very popular, and the IRS is actively promoting it as the way to go now and for the future. Other free services at the IRS include TeleTax, TaxFax, and talking to real people over the phone or at an IRS office.

For those who dread filling out tax forms, whether digitally or with a stubby pencil, the IRS trains volunteers to prepare taxes for active duty personnel, retirees, and their dependents, free of charge. The Volunteer Income Tax Assistance (VITA) representatives are collateral duty personnel on ships, especially aircraft carriers, and on Navy and Marine Corps bases.

Trained volunteers at our military tax sites will prepare the tax returns; federal and state; for free and electronically file them for free. In a few cases, its not possible to send returns electronically, so paper returns must be used. To have taxes prepared by a VITA rep, bring complete tax records, such as dependents' Social Security cards, W-2 and 1099 forms from employers and banks, dependents' Social Security cards, W-2 and 1099 forms from employers and banks, and paperwork for any special circumstances, such as selling a home. For complex returns, bring a copy of your prior year's tax return to the

A thorn in the side of American taxpayers since the tea-tossing incident, the idea of paying taxes has been fair game for American humorists, who have added some levity to our annual tax rite. But as Benjamin Franklin observed, "In this world nothing can be said to be certain except death and taxes."

Editor's Note: Volunteer income tax assistance (VITA) is available at NSA Mid-South for people making less than $35,000 who would like assistance with simple returns and electronic filings. This free service is available at two locations: on the fist deck of Bldg. 455 (by appointment by calling 874-7379), and walk-ins at Bldg. 791, Room H200, from 8 a.m. to 12 p.m. weekdays.

WHAT WOULD YOU BE LIKE IF YOU DIDN'T PRAY?

BY CHAPLAIN ROB BEEDE

Pastor Henri Nouwen tells the story how he was in a hurry one day to make a meeting. As he rushed to get there, a man named Dan stopped him wanting to talk. Nouwen was preoccupied and told him he couldn't see him right then. Later that day, Dan called Nouwen and told him that he if he was a man of prayer, he certainly didn't live up to it as he was selfish and rude.

Nouwen recounted this story to a friend. He told her with tears in his eyes that what hurt so much was that these things Dan said about him were true. As he thought about it, he said, "I wonder if Dan ever considered what I would be like if I wasn't a man of prayer?" ("The Only Necessary Thing: Living A Prayerful Life" by Henri Nouwen, p.9).

His words struck me as I read them. I thought of my own life and how often I fail. The thought struck me of how calming prayer is and how it helps me to remember that there is someone there who cares, someone who can handle the difficult situations in life and someone who hears me and changes me. I thought how God has so often intervened in my life. Then I remembered Nouwen's words and wondered, "What would I be like if I wasn't a man of prayer?"

The creative goal is to make the viewer think and see that it is not all about the action, but also stealth and mystery. "If I was a parent looking at the other commercials about the SEALs,

By David Britton Peel Attorney at Law

www.coleandpeel.com Big Cases of 2005

battles over corporate wrongdoing yielded some of the largest awards. The biggest verdict was in the securities fraud case brought by Coleman, the camping gear company. A Florida jury in May handed out nearly $1.44 billion in total damages, including $850 million in punitive damage to punish the wrongful conduct. An appeal is pending.

Another huge verdict came in a case alleging that the purchaser of a big California life insurer had concealed its ties to a bank, in violation of a state law prohibiting banks from participating in the management of insurance companies. A California jury came back with $700 million in punitives, but the judge tossed out the award, reducing the punitives recovery to zero.

Enron Corp., WorldCom Inc. and other high-profile corporate scandals look to make corporate malfeasance the most popular big dollars cases. At the same time, jurors have begun to temper their awards in personal injury verdicts, he said. They also tend to be better educated about the legal process and require more from plaintiffs' lawyers in terms of causation and injury in those types of cases.

Only one medical malpractice case ranked among the top verdicts last year. It involved a cancer patient who was given a massive overdose of Taxol, a chemotherapy drug. The jury gave $606 million in damages, which was reduced to $1 million by agreement of the parties.

The types of cases that made the top 100 verdicts of 2005 varied greatly, from accounting malpractice to workplace safety. Products liability was the most common kind of action, with 14 cases falling under that category. Thirteen trials involved motor vehicle cases, 11 involved medical malpractice, nine were breach of contract actions and seven were intellectual property (like copyright and trademark) cases.

Although products liability actions were the most common cases last year, the top five verdicts did not include such an action. The products liability lawsuit with the highest verdict was a Vioxx case, in which the jury awarded the plaintiff $253 million for the pharmaceutical company's failure to warn of the product's risk of causing heart attacks. Some $229 million of the award was in punitive damages, which were capped at $1.65 million. The end result was a $26.1 million verdict.

Punitive damages are effective, but still rare. It is rarer still they survive an appeal.
